

5.2.4: Distribution of Hispanics Population

Many of the states with large Hispanic populations were states taken from Mexico by the United States in the Mexican American War. In some ways, these places didn't come to the United States, the United States came to them. Certainly, a pattern is apparent. Generally, the parts of the U.S. closest to Mexico or the Caribbean are the most Hispanic. There are other areas with high Hispanic populations. These places have been attractive to immigrants for their employment prospects.

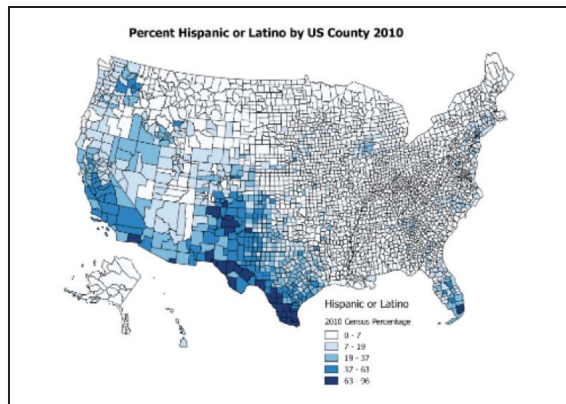

Figure 5.2.4.1: The Distribution of the Hispanic Population. Original work by David Dorrell is licensed under CC BY SA 4.0.

5.2.4: Distribution of Hispanics Population is shared under a not declared license and was authored, remixed, and/or curated by LibreTexts.