

The Future is OPEN

RADICAL REACTIONS OF CARBOHYDRATES I: STRUCTURE AND REACTIVITY OF CARBOHYDRATE RADICALS

Although the study and investigation of new reactions continue, an increasing amount of effort is directed toward application of radical reactions to synthesis of carbohydrates and carbohydrate-containing materials. Much of this effort is concerned with preparation of biologically active compounds. There is also considerable interest in determining the roles of radical reactions of carbohydrates in living systems.

Roger W. Binkley and Edith R. Binkley

