

The Future is OPEN

FERMENTATION IN FOOD CHEMISTRY

Fermentation is the chemical process that involve micro-organisms to break down complex organic substances generally in the absence of oxygen to generate alcohol and carbon dioxide. Humans have been exploiting fermentation for making bread, wine, beer, and many types of food.

Kate Graham
College of Saint Benedict/Saint John's
University

